RochesterWorks! Presents Two Free Workshops for Employers on NYS Human Rights Law & Unemployment Insurance May 4th and May 17th

Rochester, NY—April 20, 2007—RochesterWorks! www.rochesterworks.org, Monroe County's largest employment and training initiative, has announced two free workshops for employers to help business owners and managers become informed of important business issues and take their businesses to new levels of success. The workshops are held at RochesterWorks! Career Center at 255 North Goodman St.

NYS Human Rights Law - "What Employers Need to Know"

Friday, May 4, 2007, 12 noon – 2 p.m.

Presenter: Julia Day, Regional Director, NYS Division of Human Rights
Employers with four or more employees are legally responsible for upholding the provisions in the NYS Human Rights Law. Learn what the law says regarding hiring, firing and employing workers. Hear interesting case scenarios, and find out how the law was interpreted in each case. Ask questions and get answers from a Human Rights Law expert. A light lunch will be provided.

Unemployment Insurance 101: A Primer for Employers

Thursday, May 17th, 2007, 3:00 p.m. – 5:00 p.m.

Join us for a discussion with Vince Mecca from the New York State Department of Labor to better understand how to control UI costs, unemployment eligibility, statutory requirements, court decisions and employer accounts.

Space is limited. Please register online at www.rochesterworks.org at least two days before each workshop. For more information contact: Laura Seelman, lseelman@rochesterworks.org, 585-258-3545.
